FYI ONLY. THIS CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS IS CLOSED.

Call for Submissions: Special Issue, Cultural and Pedagogical Inquiry (CPI) Summer 2022 and Winter 2023

Posthumanism: A Desire for a New Humanity

Guest Editors: Nikki Fairchild (University of Portsmouth), Carol Lee (University of Ottawa), and Kay Sidebottom (Leeds Beckett University)

Posthuman subjectivity is a practical project. It is a praxis.

(Rosi Braidotti, 2020, p. 73)

Cultural and Pedagogical Inquiry (CPI) often addresses critical educational topics. The 2022 Summer Issue will be no different in that regard. It will, however, differ in its approach. This issue of CPI will take up educational topics and concerns from a Posthumanist perspective. The Editors of this upcoming issue are interested in how Posthumanism addresses current concerns for education and educators around the world today. Topics could include:

1. digital technologies and social media cultures
2. economies of care and economies of power
3. situated geographies in the Anthropocene
4. relational epistemologies for global citizenship
5. material ontologies of becoming and remaking
6. critical histories and decolonial perspectives
7. collaborative formations and assemblages
8. aesthetic, ethical, and artistic imagination
9. more-than-human world-building

In this Special Issue, we lean on Barad’s (2007) concept of material intra-action, Haraway’s (2016) concepts of kinship and “making with”, and Braidotti’s (2013) concepts of convergence and affirmation. More specifically, we draw on Barad’s (Barad, 2003, 2014) and Haraway’s (Haraway & Goodeve, 2013) diffractive methodologies and Braidotti’s (2019) cartographic methodology to read both the limits and possibilities of existing curriculums and educational practices we engage with as university academics, artists, poets, philosophers, teachers, cultural workers, and so on.

Submission Guidelines

The Editors invite essays on experimental and/or critical posthuman educational praxis as well as posthuman educational research. Essays may also address any aspect of posthumanism as it relates to education or to curricular and systemic barriers to posthumanist-informed educational change. Submissions are welcome from established and emerging scholars.

Essay submissions should be 5000 words or less (including references). Poetry submissions may be of any length and can address any of the topics identified above. Essays and poetry should be

Cultural and Pedagogical Inquiry, Summer 2021, 13(1), pp. 86-87
ISSN 1916-3460 © 2021 University of Alberta
http://ejournals.library.ualberta.ca/index.php/cpi/index submitted as Word files in Times Roman 12pt font. Essays should be formatted using APA. Art and photography should be submitted as JPEGs scaled to print as either half page or full-page images. These need to be at least 300 dpi resolution. Please see the journal website for more information on submissions https://journals.library.ualberta.ca/cpi/index.php/cpi/about.

We invite you to send an initial abstract (maximum 300 words) outlining your proposed submission and its format by the end of June 2021. Please send your abstract to the Editors at the email addresses below. NOTE: As a result of the sheer numbers of submissions received, the invitation to submit proposals is closed.

We will ask all accepted authors to peer-review one of the submissions to this Special Issue. Guidance and expectations about ethical and affirmative peer-review will be provided as part of this process (Strom & Mills, 2021).

Guest Editors:

Nikki Fairchild
University of Portsmouth
nikki.fairchild@port.ac.uk

Carol Lee
University of Ottawa
clee185@uottawa.ca

Kay Sidebottom
Leeds Beckett University
k.sidebottom@leedsbeckett.ac.uk

References

Cultural and Pedagogical Inquiry, Summer 2021, 13(1), pp. 86-87
ISSN 1916-3460 © 2021 University of Alberta
http://ejournals.library.ualberta.ca/index.php/cpi/index