

Phenomenology + Pedagogy

Editor Max van Manen

Associate Editors Loren Barritt,
University of Michigan, USA
Ton Beekman,
Rijksuniversiteit Utrecht,
the Netherlands
Madeleine Grumet,
Hobart and William
Smith Colleges, USA
Dieter Misgeld,
Ontario Institute for Studies
in Education, Canada
John Osborne,
University of Alberta, Canada

Book Review Editor Valerie Polakow Suransky,
University of Michigan, USA

Dissertation
Research Editor David G. Smith,
St. Thomas University, Canada

Design Terrance Zacharko

Volume 1 Number 1

Production and Editorial Staff Sharon Jamieson
Don McEachern
Otilie Sanderson

Consulting Editors

Ted Aoki, University of Alberta, Canada	Jan Dirk Imelman, Rijksuniversiteit Groningen, the Netherlands
Hans Bleeker, Rijksuniversiteit Utrecht, the Netherlands	Daniel Kallos, Lunds Universitet, Sweden
Robert Coles, Harvard University, USA	Martinus Jan Langeveld, Bilthoven, the Netherlands
Paulo Freire, PUC de São Paulo, Brazil	Wilfried Lippitz, Universität Gesamthochschule, West Germany
Hans-Georg Gadamer, Universität Heidelberg, W. Germany	James MacDonald, University of North Carolina, USA
Amedeo Giorgi, Duquesne University, USA	Karel Mulderij, Rijksuniversiteit Utrecht, the Netherlands
Maxine Greene, Columbia University, USA	William Schubert, University of Illinois, USA
Mariette Hellemans, Katholieke Universiteit Leuven, Belgium	Dorothy E. Smith, Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, Canada
Francine Hultgren, University of Maryland, USA	Ann L. Wood, University of North Carolina, USA
Margaret Hunsberger, University of Calgary, Canada

Phenomenology + Pedagogy is a human science journal dedicated to interpretive and critical studies of a broad range of pedagogic relations and situations. By "phenomenology" we mean all those forms of thinking or inquiry which in some way maintain a perspective on the lived human experience. In the phenomenological attitude we creatively seek approaches which may yield a deeper understanding of the nature of pedagogy: the way we are to live with children or with those, young and old, with whom we stand in a pedagogic relationship. The term "pedagogy" is broadly understood. It raises the question of the place and meaning of children and youth in the frame of human experience. It asks for the nature of home and school life and for the meaning of learning and curriculum experiences of those who inhabit educational institutions. It raises the question of what it means for one adult (teacher, parent, counsellor, administrator, psychologist, social worker, or friend) to be pedagogically present to another. And pedagogy raises the need for a critical examination of relevant professional practices, particular modes of reasoning, and of those institutional and societal arrangements which make an emancipatory praxis necessary.

The editors welcome formal and informal contributions on all matters relating to phenomenology and pedagogy.

Correspondence, manuscripts, and permission requests should be sent to: Max van Manen, Editor
Phenomenology + Pedagogy
4-116 Education North
The University of Alberta
Edmonton, Alberta, Canada
T6G 2G5

Published by Publication Services, Faculty of Education, University of Alberta. Subscription rates: Individuals $19/1 yr., $36/2 yrs.; Institutions $26/1 yr., $50/2yrs.; Students $15/1 yr. For delivery outside Canada add $6. Make cheque payable to Publication Services. All correspondence regarding subscriptions, distribution and sales, including requests for single copies should be directed to Otilie Sanderson, Publication Services, 4-116 Education North, Faculty of Education, University of Alberta, Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, T6G 2G5.