

Contributors

SEAN ATKINS completed his MA in history at the University of Alberta. His article in this issue of Past Imperfect is derived from his MA thesis supervised by David Marples. At present, Atkins is teaching English in Japan.

THEODORE BINNEMA is a PhD candidate at the University of Alberta. His main research interests are in the history of the Canadian west. He has published articles in the American Indian Quarterly (1994), Prairie Forum (1995), and has an article scheduled for publication in the Canadian Historical Review in March 1996.

RICHARD BOBIER is a graduate student at the University of Alberta. He is currently researching east European history.

STEVEN R. HEWITT has a BA in history/political science from Wilfrid Laurier University (1990) and an MA in history from the University of Saskatchewan (1992). His MA thesis, from which this article is derived, deals with the On to Ottawa Trek in Manitoba and Ontario. Currently a PhD student in history at the University of Saskatchewan, his dissertation will examine the evolution of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in Alberta and Saskatchewan through the force's interaction with labour, immigrant, and ethnic communities, and radicals of the political left and right. He has published articles in Prairie Forum and Saskatchewan History. He is also co-editor of Saskatchewan History.

STEVEN KARP is a PhD student at the University of Alberta. He holds a BSFS from the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service in Washington, DC, an MDiv from Concordia Seminary in St. Louis, MO, and an MA from the University of Alberta. He and Rita Egan researched and co-authored "A Profile of Graduate Students at the University of Alberta—October 1992," which was presented at the Annual Conference of the Canadian Educational Researchers' Association in June 1993 in Ottawa. His main field of concentration is German diplomatic history and his dissertation will explore German-Canadian relations prior to World War I.

MARK A. LEVENE is a doctoral candidate in the Department of History and Classics at the University of Alberta. He is researching a dissertation on universities and elite formation in early twentieth-century English Canada.

WILLIAM C. MILLS has a BA with distinction from the University of Calgary (major in History and a minor in Classics) and an MA from the University of Alberta. He has one article published (1993) and another forthcoming in The International History Review. He is also a historical cartographer and his maps have appeared in ten history books published in the last few years. He also has had articles published in Cartographica and the Bulletin of the Association of Canadian Map Libraries and Archives. He is currently researching for a book on Count Dino Grandi's career as Italian ambassador to London in the 1930s.

ANATOL L. SCOTT has a BA (1993) in English and an MA (1994) in history, both from the University of Alberta. An earlier draft of his paper was presented at the Seventh North American Fur Trade Conference at Halifax, Nova Scotia in May 1995. Scott holds a University of Alberta PhD scholarship and has recently accepted a Gorsebrook Fellowship to pursue research under the auspices of St. Mary's University, Halifax. His dissertation is tentatively titled "The Role of Alcohol in Canada's Early Fish and Fur Communities: The Maritime Provinces 1670-1850."

YIFENG ZHAO earned his BA and MA (history) at the Northeast Normal University of China. Now at the University of Alberta's Department of History and Classics, he is completing his PhD dissertation entitled "Non-Confucian Social Activities in North and Southeast China in the Seventeenth Century." He has presented a paper on the grass-roots level intellectuals of China at the Fourth Annual Conference of Graduate Students at Columbia University. His Chinese-language publications include two co-authored books on Chinese political history and historiography and about twenty articles on late imperial Chinese history and historiography. As an avocation, he also publishes literary essays and translations on various topics.