

Contributors

Natacha Carroll completed a BA (hons.) in Spanish at Dalhousie University and a MA in History at the University of Alberta. Her research centres on anti-racism, representations of Blackness and the idea of race. She is currently pursuing French courses at the Faculté Saint-Jean, University of Alberta.

IV

Carl C. Creason graduated from Murray State University in 2011 with a BA in history education. He is currently enrolled in a MAEd (history emphasis) program at Murray State and is an instructor for The Princeton Review at Calloway County Middle School in Murray, Kentucky. His research interests include the American Civil War, the US South and Kentucky. He may be contacted at ccreason@murraystate.edu.

W. Mikkel Dack is a PhD Candidate in history at the University of Calgary. He earned his B.A in History at the University of Calgary (2006), with a minor in Psychology, and his M.A. in History at the University of Waterloo (2008). He has also studied at the Freie Universität Berlin and Helmut Schmidt Universität in Hamburg. His major research interests are in transatlantic and German cultural and psychosocial history with a particular emphasis on German-North American relations. He can be contacted at wmdack@ucalgary.ca.

Jeremy Fradkin holds an MA in History from the University of Alberta. His research focuses on the history of religious thought in early modern Western Europe, with a particular interest in arguments for religious toleration in seventeenth-century England. He can be contacted at jfradkin@gmail.com.

Ali Jones studied intellectual history and theory at the University of Alberta and obtained a BA (hons.) in 2007. She is currently pursuing an MA in history at the University of Alberta and the Université de Montreal. Her research explores the intellectual and cultural history of German political and environmental social movements. She may be contacted at allisonj@ualberta.ca.

Ryan Holroyd received a double-major BA (2007) in history and psychology and an MA (2011) in history both from the University of Alberta. Currently, he is pursuing a PhD in the Pennsylvania State University's Department of History. My current research focuses on Early Modern maritime trade and cultural exchange in the East Asian seas. He can be contacted at reh222@psu.edu.

Caroline Lieffers completed her MA in History at the University of Alberta in 2010. Her research interests include the histories of health, medicine, and domestic life in nineteenth and early twentieth-century Britain and North America. Her work can be found in the Journal of Social History and Women's History Review, among other venues. She may be contacted at clieffers@gmail.com.

Valerie Schutte is a PhD candidate at the University of Akron, focusing on early modern England. Her dissertation examines printed book dedications directed at Queen Mary I as an arena in which men and women negotiated patronage, politics, religion, and gender. She has presented several conference papers on the Tudor queens. She can be contacted at ves8@zips.uakron.edu.

IVI

Daniel Sims is currently a PhD candidate at the University of Alberta in the Department of History and Classics. He specializes in Aboriginal ethno-history in British Columbia and is currently working on his dissertation on the impact of the Peace River hydroelectric development in the 1960s and Hart Highway of the 1950s on the Tse Keh Nay (Sekani) First Nations in British Columbia. One of these First Nations is his home community of Tsay Keh Dene. He can be contacted at dcsims@ualberta.ca.