

CONTRIBUTORS

Jean Anderson is Associate Professor (Reader) and Programme Director for French at Victoria University of Wellington, where she founded the New Zealand Centre for Literary Translation in 2007. She has translated a dozen novels by international writers (Ananda Devi, Moetai Brotherson, Chantal Spitz, Pierre Furlan) and numerous short pieces into English for publication in the UK, the USA, Fiji, Australia, India and New Zealand, and co-translated into French the works of several leading New Zealand authors (Patricia Grace, Janet Frame, Owen Marshall). In addition to researching literary translation issues with a particular focus on Pacific texts, she has also published in a wide range of other fields, including crime fiction, nineteenth-century and contemporary women's writing, and short stories. She is currently editor of the New Zealand Journal of French Studies.

Ariane DesRochers détient un baccalauréat spécialisé en traduction de l'Université Concordia (2012). Elle poursuit actuellement des études de deuxième cycle en traductologie à l'Université d'Ottawa, où elle travaille sur des questions idéologiques et féministes en traduction littéraire auprès de Marc Charron et de Luise von Flotow.

Elena Di Giovanni is Lecturer in Translation at the University of Macerata (Italy), where she is also Deputy Vice Chancellor for the development of linguistic competences. She holds a degree in specialized translation from the University of Bologna at Forlì, Italy and a PhD in English and audiovisual translation from the University of Naples Federico II. She has taught audiovisual translation theory and practice within several MA programmes: University of Bologna, University of Parma, IULM (Milan), Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona (Spain) and Roehampton University, London (UK). She is also Director of the international MA programme in Accessibility to Media, Arts and Culture (University of Macerata). Her research interests include translation as intercultural communication, translation in postcolonial settings (mainly India and Western Africa), and audiovisual translation in all its forms. Her publications include: "Writing as Translation in Africa: the case of Hama Tuma" (Carocci, 2013), Audiovisual translation across Europe: an ever changing landscape (Peter Lang, 2012), Multidisciplinarity in audiovisual translation (MonTi), 2012), Between text and receiver: translation and accessibility, (Peter Lang, 2011), Oltre l'Occidente: traduzione e alterità culturale (Bompiani, 2009).

Cecilia Foglia received her BA in Foreign Languages, Literatures and Culture and her MA in Modern Euro-American Languages and Literatures from University of Macerata (Italy). Currently she is pursuing doctoral studies in Translation at University of Montreal, where she is also research assistant for the project "Exploratory Study of Translation Practices in the Industry of Textbooks Intended for Post-Secondary Education", directed by Professor H el ene Buzelin, and teaching assistant of Italian. Her research interests are focused on the translation of Italian emigrant writers in Qu ebec and Canada, cultural translation, self-translation, theatre translation and sociology of translation. E-mail address: cecilia.foglia@umontreal.ca

Apr es des  tudes portant sur le cin ema de Tim Burton, Adrien Guyot a quitt  la France pour le Canada o  son exp rience l'a pouss    d velopper une nouvelle pens e   l' gard des litt ratures francophones. En 2009, il a compl t  un M.A.   l'Universit  de l'Alberta lors duquel il s'est concentr  sur le concept de monstrosit  dans les litt ratures antillaise et qu b coise. Il est actuellement doctorant   l'Universit  de l'Alberta et sa recherche porte sur l' tude de l'am ricanit , de la dystopie ainsi que la cr ation d'identit s litt raires.

Gabrielle Kristjanson holds a Bachelor of Science and a Master of Arts in Comparative Literature from the University of Alberta. Currently, she is a Ph.D. candidate in English at the University of Melbourne, Australia. Her research focuses on fictional representations of the child predator in Western literature and film, with special emphasis on the social discourses that imbue the constructed nature of childhood innocence and criminal monstrosity.

Anne Malena is Professor of French and Translation Studies as well as the Director of the Certificate in Translation Studies, which she created in 2005, in the department of Modern Languages and Cultural Studies at the University of Alberta. She has published The Negotiated Self: The Dynamics of Identity in Francophone Caribbean Narrative (New York: Peter Lang, 1998); French translations of two novels by Kristjana Gunnars (La Maraude, Lem ac 1995, which was nominated for the Governor General Literary Award in Translation, and Degr  Z ro, Lem ac 1998); many chapters and articles in top journals specializing in Caribbean Studies, Translation Studies and Cultural Studies as well as translated short stories, essays and poetry. She is the Editor-in-Chief of this journal and her current book project involves documenting the history of translation in Louisiana.

Emily McManus is an Assistant Lecturer in the Department of Performance Studies at Texas A&M University. She received a Ph.D. in ethnomusicology/musicology (2011) and a M.A. in historical musicology (2007) from the University of Minnesota. Her interdisciplinary research focuses on contemporary performances of the Argentine tango in the United States and utilizes a combined ethnographic and historical methodology drawing from musicology, ethnomusicology, dance studies, translation studies, and performance studies.

Rhett McNeil is a scholar, critic, and literary translator from Texas, where he graduated Phi Beta Kappa from UT-Austin with degrees in English, Portuguese, and Art History. He completed an MA in Comparative Literature at Penn State University and is currently finishing a PhD in the same department, with a doctoral minor in Aesthetics. While at Penn State, he has taught courses on comparative literature, film, Spanish, and Portuguese and organized academic symposia on literary translation, contemporary world fiction, and ecocriticism. His translations include novels and short stories from some of the most innovative and accomplished authors on the world literary scene, including Antônio Lobo Antunes, Enrique Vila-Matas, Gonçalo M. Tavares, João Almino, and A.G. Porta. Rhett also edited and translated a volume of short fiction by the Brazilian master Machado de Assis (forthcoming from Dalkey Archive Press), who, along with Jorge Luis Borges, is the subject of his dissertation. His translation of Gonçalo M. Tavares's novel Joseph Walser's Machine made the longlist for the 2013 Best Translated Book Award.

Liz Medendorp has an M.A. in Translation Studies in the Comparative Literature Program at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. Her thesis is an interdisciplinary investigation of intersemiotic translation through the lens of cross-media adaptation in the works of Joss Whedon. Firmly believing in the cultural significance of popular phenomena, her research interests include pop culture and new media studies as they relate to translation studies, particularly in the areas of media convergence, participatory culture, transmedia storytelling, transformative work, fan studies, and interactive media narratives. She is also the author of a chapter in a forthcoming volume in the Intellect, Ltd. Fan Phenomena series, a reviewer for PopMatters.com, and has presented her research in many different areas at numerous academic conferences. This fall, she will be teaching English in Colorado Springs and continuing her own work in translation.

Maryam Mohammadi Dehcheshmeh has a BA and an MA degrees in Translation Studies, and at present, she is studying for a Ph.D. in the same field at the University of Ottawa. She taught translation theories and literary translation in Iranian universities for two years. Besides her major interest in translation technology, critical discourse analysis, pseudo-translation, power relations in translation, and post-colonialism and translation have always been appealing areas to her.

Harriet K. Namukwaya is a teacher of French in the department of European and Oriental Languages at the School of Languages, Literature and Communication, Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda. Her areas of specialization are linguistics, communication skills in French and Translation (French/English and vice versa). Besides teaching English and French to all levels of language learners, her core skills include the teaching of communication skills, supervision of research projects, conducting research and undertaking editorial work. She is currently the general secretary for l'Association des Professeurs de Français en Ouganda-APFO (French teachers' Association of Teachers of French in Uganda) and has recently completed a Master of Arts in French Applied Linguistics in the department of Modern Languages and Cultural Studies at the University of Alberta. Her research interests are in the area of foreign language teaching in a multicultural context and intercultural communicative competence.

Tom Priestly was born in Uganda in 1937, raised in England, and has lived in Canada since 1966. He is Professor Emeritus of Russian Language and Slavic Linguistics, and retired in 2002. His special research interest is in Slovene sociolinguistics, and is based on fieldwork conducted, on and off, since 1978 in Sele, a Slovenian-minority village in Austria. Apart from publications in socio- and politico-linguistics, he has published in Russian phonetics, child phonology and the history of linguistics. He has been translating Slovenian literature since 1989, in particular poetry, including poems by Milka Hartman, Maja Haderlap, France Balantič, Cvetka Lipuš, Janko Messner, Ivan Minatti, Tone Pavček and Kajetan Kovič, and (with Henry R. Cooper) many poems by Francè Prešeren.

Dr. Renée von Paschen is a professional literary translator and writer, who's also taught literary translation as a Lecturer at the Univ. of Innsbruck. Most recently, Renée held a postdoctoral fellowship at the Univ. of Minnesota. Born in Canada, she has a Master of Arts in Gender Studies and a PhD in Theater, Film and Media Studies from the University of Vienna. Her translations, including Austrian authors from H.C. Artmann to Stefan Zweig, have been published in Europe, the USA, Canada & Australia. A bilingual collection of Renée's own poems entitled 'Snapshots' appeared in Metamorphoses in the USA, and her work has also been published in journals, such as Ellipse or Mobius in English, French and German. Renée regularly gives poetry readings in the USA, Austria and Canada. Her website is: www.art-translation.net

Saber Zahedi is a M.A student of Translation Studies at Allameh Tabataba'i University, Tehran. His area of interest includes translation directionality, process oriented research and cognitive aspects of translation. He has recently finished his thesis entitled as translation directionality and the distribution of initial norms under the supervision of professor Mollanazar. He also works as a freelance translator. He has had article submissions and acceptances from different journals and conferences.