

Contributors

AADNE AASLAND is a senior researcher at the Norwegian Institute for Urban and Regional Research (NIBR), OsloMet—Oslo Metropolitan University. He has conducted research on Ukraine since 2008, including on decentralization and local democracy (with the Association of Ukrainian Cities) and on regional diversity (with V. N. Karazin Kharkiv National University). He is leader of the Norwegian Network for Research on Ukraine (UKRAINETT). He co-edited (with Sabine Kropp) The Accommodation of Regional and Ethno-Cultural Diversity in Ukraine (Palgrave Macmillan, 2021).

OLEKSANDRA DEINEKO is an associate professor of sociology at V. N. Karazin Kharkiv National University and since April 2022 has worked as a guest researcher (Scholars at Risk) at the Norwegian Institute for Urban and Regional Research (NIBR), OsloMet—Oslo Metropolitan University. She is head of the youth sector of the Sociological Association of Ukraine (SAU) and a project researcher at Fostering the Urban Food System Transformation through Innovative Living Labs (2021–24). She has written articles and chapters on social cohesion, identity, trust, civil activism, and migration.

OLEKSANDR DEMIANCHUK is a professor and dean of the Department of Social Sciences and Social Technologies at the National University of Kyiv-Mohyla Academy. He has taken part in various exchange programs, including a Fulbright scholarship to research education reform in post-communist countries at the University of Minnesota (2001). His research interests include public-policy analysis, public administration, political and administrative reforms, and educational policy in Ukraine. He is co-author (with Darrell R. Lewis and Darwin Hendel) of Private Higher Education in Transition Countries (KM Academia, 2003).

OLGA FILIPPOVA is an associate professor of sociology at V. N. Karazin Kharkiv National University and since March 2022 has worked as a project researcher at the Karelian Institute, University of Eastern Finland. Her research focuses on the politics of identity; public perceptions of reform in Ukraine; social (re)construction of the past; border studies; cyber-ethnography; and urban food sustainability. Her publications have appeared in Europe-Asia Studies; Journal of Communist Studies and Transition Politics; Journal of the American Academy of Religion; Ab Imperio: Studies of New Imperial History and Nationalism in the Post-Soviet Space; and other venues.

KATERYNA HREK is a postgraduate student in the Department of Economic Geography and Ecological Management at Iurii Fed'kovich Chernivtsi National University. Her research involves the history of geography in Ukraine, and in particular the interdisciplinary legacy of Myron Korduba.

TETIANA IEMCHUK is a lecturer in the Department of Economic Geography and Ecological Management at Iurii Fed'kovich Chernivtsi National University. She is a scholar of socio-economic geography, focusing on tourist management, nature protection, and the subsurface water in the Prut River basin. She has also studied the archival and little-known geographical works of Myron Korduba and Anton Syniavs'kyi.

LADA KOLOMIYETS is a professor in the Department of Translation Theory and Practice from the English Language at Taras Shevchenko National University of Kyiv. She was Dartmouth Harris Visiting Professor at Dartmouth College (2022–23). She has written extensively on the history of censorship in Eastern Europe; Ukrainian identity in the twentieth and early twenty-first centuries; post-communist transformation; and Ukrainian literary translation and translators in the 1920s–30s. She is the editor of Living the Independence Dream: Ukraine and Ukrainians in Contemporary Socio-Political Context (Vernon Press, 2023).

KAROLINA KOZIURA is a PhD candidate in sociology and historical studies at The New School for Social Research. Her research interests include nationalism, memory, and the politics of knowledge in and about Eastern Europe, focusing on the memory of the Holodomor during the Cold War. Her research has been published in European Journal of Sociology / Archives européennes de sociologie / Europäisches Archiv für Soziologie; East European Politics and Societies; and other venues.

OLENA MURADYAN is dean of the School of Sociology (since 2015) and an associate professor in the Department of Political Sociology (since 2013) at V. N. Karazin Kharkiv National University. From 2018–20, she oversaw the Accommodation of Regional and Ethno-Cultural Diversity in Ukraine research project, conducted jointly with OsloMet—Oslo Metropolitan University. She has published extensively on social inequality, gender sociology, social values, political sociology, higher education, urban food policy, public health, and international comparative sociological studies.

ANATOLY OLEKSIYENKO is a professor of international higher education at The Education University of Hong Kong (EdUHK). He holds a PhD in Higher Education from the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education (OISE), University of Toronto. His research focuses on dilemmas of agency and leadership in the transforming systems of higher education. He is an expert on post-Soviet academia, especially regarding the geopolitics of knowledge production and the legacies of propaganda and post-truth. He is the author of the award-winning Global Mobility and Higher Learning (Routledge, 2018).

VERONIKA PUHACH is a PhD student in philosophy at the National University of Kyiv-Mohyla Academy. Her research interests include feminism, women in the history of philosophy, and the history of Ukrainian feminism and its relationship with nationalism. She also conducted PhD research on Ukrainian women's movements as an exchange student at the University of Glasgow (in 2022).

VALERII RUDENKO is a professor in the Department of Economic Geography at Iurii Fed'kovych Chernivtsi National University. He specializes in the history of geography in Ukraine and globally from ancient times until the present day, as well as in the econo-geographical evaluation of the natural resources of Ukraine. He is the author of monographs on prominent Ukrainian geographers, including Anton Syniavs'kyi, Arkadii Zhukovs'kyi, and Volodymyr Vernads'kyi. He is also co-author (with Kateryna Hrek) of Profesor Myron Korduba: Ukraïns'ka heohrafichna spadshchyna (Professor Myron Korduba: Ukrainian Geographical Legacy [Vydavnytstvo "Nashi Knyhy," 2021]).